Thanks to your generous donations, The Post-Crescent's Dollars for Diapers campaign reached its $60,000 goal, helping hundreds of struggling families through the Fox Cities Diaper Bank!

"We are truly elated over the success of this year's Dollars for Diapers campaign," said Pamela Henson, The Post-Crescent's president and publisher. "We set the most aggressive goal in our history with this important community initiative, $60,000, and thanks to the big heart of this community, our partners and our readers, we have met this number. A huge thank you to each and every individual who donated dollars and/or diapers,"

In addition to monetary gifts, we collected more than 5,200 diapers and 23 containers of wipes, plus lotion, bottles and formula.

Peter Kelly, United Way Fox Cities president and CEO, said the diaper bank will be stocked with nearly 250,000 diapers because of this year's campaign.

"We are so pleased with the wonderful success of this year's Dollars for Diapers campaign. This support is critical in our efforts to help over 650 struggling families every month provide diapers for their babies," Kelly said.

Campaign sponsors Huggies and Kimberly-Clark Cares were crucial to the campaign's success.

Thank you to our partners J. J. Keller Foundation, United Way Fox Cities, Thrivent Financial, Kimberly-Clark Cares and U.S. Venture, who each matched donations of $5,000. Together, Fox Communities, Prospera, Evergreen, Capital, Badger Globe, Thrivent Federal, Unison and St. Elizabeth Employees credit unions matched $10,000. The Post-Crescent Community Fund chipped in $5,000 at the end of the campaign to get us to our goal.
